Getting started

Create an account

When you sign up for a d3bate account we extract your email addresses' domain name and use this to decide what happens next.

If you are the first user to sign up from your organisation

If you are the first person to sign up with your organisation's domain name, a new debating club is created, of which you are the owner. We realise this might cause complications. If someone else has set up a debating club for your organisation please raise an issue on Github or email `me` `@` `teymour` `.` `tk` and we'll manually update the records in our database.

If you are not the first person

You will automatically be added to the existing debating club with member privileges.
